Overview

Who owns Hitachi energy Bulgaria?

Bulgaria's business, economy and politics explained in more than 100 pages of quality reporting. Two years after Japan's Hitachi acquired ABB's Power Grids division, thus becoming an owner of its Bulgarian subsidiary, the new company, Hitachi Energy Bulgaria, has expanded its plant for high-voltage products in the town of Sevlievo.

Will Hitachi energy Bulgaria's turnover surge by 2021?

This year alone turnover is expected to surge by 20%. Hitachi Energy Bulgaria has added 6,200 sq. m. of production space on its site in Sevlievo. The project started in January 2021 and finished earlier this year.

Is Sevlievo part of Hitachi energy's global high-voltage product network?

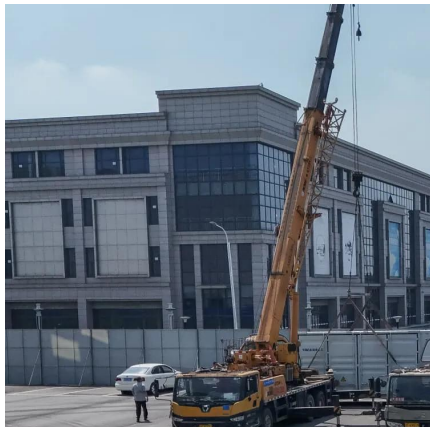

"Our Sevlievo facility is part of Hitachi Energy's extensive global high-voltage product network," says Andrea Brognara, Factory Manager of Sevlievo unit, in a press release. "We are delivering products that are helping to enhance the safety, reliability and efficiency of power grids while minimizing environmental impact."

Is the Bulgarian plant a strategic division for Japanese conglomerate?

According to plant manager Andrea Brognara, the Bulgarian facility is a strategic division for the Japanese conglomerate and it will continue to invest in the plant. He did not disclose the overall value of the project.
