

Can the solar all-in-one home device be moved

Overview

Can I move solar panels from one house to another?

Yes, it is, of course, possible to move solar panels from one house to another. The process, however, is difficult and the cost is high. So, when wondering “Can I take solar panels with me when I move?

”, you should first decide if it is worth doing so.

Should you move a solar system if you're selling a house?

The high cost to move a solar system is the main reason why many people choose to include the PV system as a fixture of the house they’re selling and have a new solar setup installed at their new property.

Can solar panels be damaged during a house move?

Solar panels are extremely fragile and contain delicate electrical wiring, so the risk of damaging the photovoltaic modules when removing them, disassembling them, packing them for shipping, and transporting them to another place is very high. If improperly handled, your solar equipment can be completely ruined during your house move.

Should I bring solar panels to my new home?

If you’re moving to a colder climate or to a location that sees little sunlight, there may be no point in bringing your solar panels along. And if your new property has many trees or is overshadowed by higher buildings, your solar array won’t be very effective.

What happens if you move out of state with solar panels?

If you’re moving out of state or just don’t want to take the panels with you, your solar lease agreement will be transferred to the new buyers – if they don’t agree to take over the lease, though, you’ll have to buy out the remainder.

Can a solar system be moved between buildings?

From summer 2019, medium and large building-mounted solar PV systems that exceed 50 kWp are allowed to be moved between buildings without the loss of Feed-in Tariff (FIT) payments. This exception applies only to these larger systems.
